M.M. But all he ever does is...I don't even know... I think half the time he isn't even paying attention. And he contradicts me and makes jokes. He knows how I hate being contradicted when I know I am right. Sometimes I just want to take him and shake some sense into him. If I could just make him mad once, that would be an improvement.

But he won't even get mad for me. He just shuts down, and I can see that his mind is somewhere out in space, somewhere I can't get at him. On the other hand, he has no right to get mad because I only do what I do to help him, and he's always wrong, anyway... He needs me. Without me, he's helpless and lost. And he doesn't appreciate me at all. I do my duty by reminding him of everything he needs and everything he can't do by himself, and how does he repay me? He pays me no attention. If he does pay attention he whines and argues. He refuses to budge unless I force him. And he can't do anything right! If I could only know what's in that mind of his. I don't understand him at all. Am I doing something wrong? No, of course not! Being wrong doesn't get a person anyplace. Being wrong is just... wrong! Oh, Why didn't I marry someone else? Nobody else asked me! That's why! It was either marry Walter or be an old maid!

Mrs. Mitty: You were going too fast!

They ride in silence for a moment.

Mrs. Mitty: You're tense up again. Its one of your days. I wish you'd let Dr. Renshaw look you over
Walter: I don't need a doctor. (aside) I need a therapist and a lawyer!
Mrs. Mitty: You're not as young as you used to be, and you're not strong. You're always catching whatever is going around, and you're tense most of the time. You need medical attention. I'm going to call Dr. Renshaw and make an appointment for you. ointment. an appointment.

Walter: I don't need overshoes.

Mrs. Mitty: We've been all through that a thousand times. You caught a 4-week-long bout of bronchitis last year because your feet got wet.

Walter: I remember. (aside) You tortured me through all four weeks of it. I can never look at a mustard plaster and a cup of lemon tea in the face again.

Mrs. Mitty: Why don't you wear your gloves? Have you lost your gloves?

Walter: No. Dear. My gloves are here, and they are safe. I'm even thinking of insuring them.

Mrs. Mitty: Don't be impertinent. I only want what's good for you. Put them on.

WALTER reaches into a pocket, brings out the gloves and puts them on.

Exit Mrs. Mitty. Walter removes the gloves and begins to drive.

He comes back onstage carrying a shoebox.

Walter: Now what? What was that other thing she said I have to get? Kleenex? Squibb's? Razor blades? Puppy biscuits? No. Toothpaste, toothbrush, bicarbonate, carborundum, initiative and referendum? I give up. She'll remember, though. "Where's the what's-it's-name?" she'll ask. "Don't tell me you forgot the what's-it's-name." She'll never let me hear the end of it. She'll torture me until I die from the pain of her voice needling my brain. That'll show her. I'll die, and she'll be sorry. Murder by nagging. I'm sure there's a law against that somewhere.

The stage goes dark.

Walter: ...Ow! Mrs. Mitty: What? What do you mean? Did you get the what's-it's-name. The puppy biscuit? What's in that box?

Walter: The overshoes you told me to buy.

Mrs. Mitty: Couldn't you have put them on in the store?

Walter: I was thinking. Does it ever occur to you that I am sometimes thinking?

Mrs. Mitty: I'm going to take your temperature when I get you home.

(They walk out of the hotel)

Mrs. Mitty: Wait here for me. I forgot something. I won't be a minute.

That time it was hot outside. I was almost roasted when she finally came out. I don't dare go inside, though. Facing a firing squad would be more pleasant than hearing her screeching voice nagging at me. She could shatter all the stained glass windows in a cathedral with that voice.
